Dreſden, Sept. 25. N. S.

ON the Twentieth Inſtant the Czar of Muſcovy arriv'd here with a ſmall Retinue, and was receiv'd at his Entrance by the Burghers and Soldiers in Garriſon, under a Diſcharge of all the Artillery. His Majeſty alighted at the Houſe of Monſieur Viztum, heretofore Ambaſſador from the King of Poland to the Muſcovite Court; and after Supper went to the Prince his Son's Lodgings, having refus'd to lodge in the Caſtle, where an Apartment was prepar'd for him. On the Twenty-ſecond his Majeſty ſet out from hence for Carlsbad, under a Guard of Two hundred Granadiers, who are order'd by the King of Poland to wait on him during his Reſidence at that place. On Wedneſday laſt, in the Evening, Prince Kurakin, late Miniſter and Plenipotentiary from his Czariſh Majeſty to the Queen of Great Britain, arriv'd here from Poſen, together with Mr. Bruce, General of the Muſcovite Artillery; and Yeſterday they left this Place, in order to wait on the Czar at Carlsbad. Frequent Couriers arrive here from the Saxon Army in Pomerania, by whom we are advis'd, that the Confederate Forces continue in their former Situations near Stralſund, and that they are making the neceſſary Preparations for their intended Enterprize on the Iſle of Rugen.

Berlin, Sept. 26. N. S. On Monday laſt the King of Pruſſia remov'd from Landsberg to Wolup, and proceeded from thence Yeſterday to Goltz, to which Place his Majeſty has been accompany'd by the Queen, and the whole Court. Monſieur Marſhall, who has attended the King of Poland ever ſince that Prince enter'd Pomerania, return'd from thence the Twentieth Inſtant, and is gone to Goltz, where it is believ'd, his Majeſty intends ſhortly to hold an extraordinary Council of War. Monſieur Kanke, the Privy Counſellor, ſet out from hence Yeſterday in the Evening for Carlsbad, whither the Daniſh and Ruſſian Miniſters are likewiſe gone, in order to wait on his Czariſh Majeſty at that Place.

Bruſſels, Sept. 29. N. S. Our Letters from the Frontiers adviſe, That the French continue to commit great Diſorders in the Province of Hainault, where they have lately plunder'd ſeveral Villages, deſtroy'd the Forage, and carry'd off all the Cattle in the Country, without any Regard to the Treaty of Contributions. All poſſible Diligence is uſed in repairing the Works of Bouchain, which hath of late been much retarded by reaſon of the ill Weather. So ſoon as the Allies have put that Place in a ſtate of Defence, it is believ'd the Confederate Army will canton during their continuing in the Field. They write from Luxemburgh, of the Twenty-third Inſtant, that the late Elector of Bavaria was preparing to remove to Namur. Monſieur Vanden Berg, the Deputy of the States-General, return'd hither on Friday laſt with his Family from Holland.

Extract of a Letter from Capt. Bourn, Commander of Her Majeſty's Ship the Newcaſtle, in Carliſle-Bay, in Barbadoes, July 17. 1711.

ON the Tenth Day of June laſt, I met off Port St. Piers in Martineco, a French Ship of Thirty-ſix Guns, a Hag-boat of Twenty-four, Two Maſt Veſſels, and Nine Privateer Sloops, having, as I have been ſince inform'd, Two thouſand Men on Board, in order to make a Deſcent on Antegoa. By that time I got within Piſtol-ſhot, it fell ſtark Calm, and they lay ſo upon my Quarter, that I could not bring a Broadſide to bear: However, after about three Hours Engagement, they were ſo ſhatter'd, that they endeavour'd with the very firſt Breeze, to return into Harbour, in which they ſucceeded; for I had two Nine pound Shots through my Foremaſt, for which Reaſon I could not venture to carry Sail upon it, and all my Rigging and Sails were much diſabled. On the Friday following I returned to Barbadoes; where the next Day two Expreſſes arriv'd from the Leeward Iſlands, deſiring our Aſſiſtance. Hereupon I immediately refitted my Maſt and Ship, and Sail'd on Sunday in the Evening for Antegoa, but perceiving by Signals made from the Shore, that the Enemy were not there, I continu'd my Courſe for Montſerat, where I arriv'd on Wedneſday, and was adviſ'd by the Preſident and Council of that Iſland, to proceed to Nevis, as the Place the moſt likely to be Attack'd: Accordingly I Sail'd from Montſerat about Twelve at Night, but had hardly been gone three Hours, before ſixteen Privateers landed Fifteen hundred Men on the Iſland. Immediately upon this a ſmall Sloop found means to eſcape, with Intelligence of it to me: Which when the Enemy perceiv'd, and having receiv'd Aſſurances of my being at Nevis, they inſtantly embark'd again, and got off before my return, without doing any damage to the Iſland, and leaving ſeveral of their Men Priſoners behind 'em. Theſe Men upon Examination inform'd us, that their firſt Deſign was upon Antegoa; but that being very much diſabled in their late Engagement with me, wherein according to their own Account, they had Sixty-four Men Kill'd, and a great many Wounded, they were not able to put to Sea, and were therefore contented to make this unſucceſsful Attempt on Montſerat.

Extract of a Leter from Captain Liſle, Commander of Her Majeſty's Ship the Diamond. dated at St. John's in Antegoa, July 22. 1711.

ON the Eighteenth Inſtant, I was order'd to Cruiſe off the Iſland of Guadaloupa, and ſail'd from St. John's on the Nineteenth. The next Day I diſcover'd a Sail; and chaſing her aſhore on Guadaloupa, I anchor'd within Gun-ſhot of her; which when the Men on board perceiv'd, they left her, and fled up into the Country: Whereupon I ſent my Boats to fetch her off, the Winds blowing directly from the Shore. It appears by the Papers we found on board, that ſhe came from St. Domin-
